Minnesota's Olmstead Plan

Listening Sessions
Summer 2013
Legal Context

- Olmstead v. L. C. is an Americans with Disabilities Act case. The US Supreme Court ruled that it is unlawful to keep people with disabilities in segregated institutional settings when they can live in a community setting.

- Both the Minnesota Human Rights Act (state law) and the Americans with Disabilities Act (federal law) prohibit discrimination against people with disabilities.

- Under both state and federal laws, government entities are required to ensure that all people with disabilities can access services and programs.

What is an Olmstead Plan?

- An Olmstead Plan is a way for a government entity to document its plans to provide services to individuals with disabilities in the most integrated setting appropriate to the individual.

- The United States Department of Justice explains that the most integrated setting is one that “enables individuals with disabilities to interact with nondisabled persons to the fullest extent possible…”
Why is Minnesota preparing an Olmstead Plan?

There are 3 main reasons:

- Developing a plan to increase integration is an ideal way to ensure Minnesota complies with the letter and spirit of the Olmstead decision.

- As part of a settlement in the Jensen v. DHS case, Minnesota agreed to develop and implement an Olmstead Plan.

- Governor Mark Dayton issued an executive order, forming the Olmstead Subcabinet and directing identified agencies to develop and implement an Olmstead Plan.
What was the Jensen v. DHS case about?

- Three families brought suit against Minnesota and DHS for the improper use of restraints at a state-run facility.

- The parties to the case agreed upon a settlement involving monetary and nonmonetary remedies.

- Among other components in the agreement, Minnesota agreed to develop and implement an Olmstead Plan for all people with disabilities.

Development of the Olmstead Plan

Step 1:
- Look at the areas where Minnesota most often provides funding and services to people with disabilities.

Step 2:
- Analyze service delivery in the areas identified.

Step 3:
- Identify the impediments in current delivery methods that prevent us from reaching the outcomes expressed in the Olmstead decision.

Step 4:
- Decide on changes needed to meet the standards of the Olmstead decision and the timeline to complete the changes.

Implementing Minnesota’s Olmstead Plan

- Funding is an ongoing part of development and implementation of Minnesota’s Olmstead Plan.

- As needed, subcabinet agencies will seek authority at the state and federal level to redirect funds away from institutional-like settings to the most integrated settings.

- Many changes planned can be accomplished within current state laws by agencies working together.

- The legislature will be asked to consider revising laws so that changes in how we deliver services can be made.
