

K-12 Telecommunications Grant Awards

The K-12 Telecommunications Grant was funded by the Tier 2 Special Fund, a fund created by the Minnesota Performance Assurance Plan (MPAP). The MPAP, a plan proposed by Qwest (now CenturyLink d.b.a. Qwest) and approved by the Commission, established wholesale telecommunications service quality standards and self-executing remedies for failure to meet those standards. On April 21, 2009, the Commission authorized a grant program to distribute funds accruing to the Tier 2 Special Fund, specifically, the “Commission delegate[d] to its Executive Secretary the authority to develop and implement a grant process for the purposes of distributing the balance of the Tier 2 Special Fund to promote telecommunications for institutions throughout the state providing primary and secondary education.”¹

On May 29, 2012, the Commission publicized the availability of the K-12 Telecommunications Grant and issued a request for proposals from qualifying educational institutions. Subsequent to the termination of the application period, August 31, 2012, and review of the proposals, it was determined that the entire Fund of $2,857,212.15 would be disbursed among the 23 educational institutions identified in the table below.

The award recipients represent a wide geographical dispersion of educational institutions, both urban and rural, and public and nonpublic. The projects proposed by the successful applicants will support over 35,000 Minnesota students by improving the ability of those students and their educators to exploit newer telecommunications technologies.
