Agency Name: Minnesota Department of Health

www.health.state.mn.us

The Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) mission is to protect, maintain and improve the health of all Minnesotans. MDH is the state's lead public health agency, responsible for operating programs that prevent infectious and chronic diseases, while promoting clean water and air, safe food, quality health care and healthy living. The department works to improve the equity of health outcomes in the state by incorporating health equity considerations into every decision or activity in which the department is engaged. MDH carries out its mission in close partnership with local public health departments, tribal governments, the federal government, and many health-related organizations. In meeting its responsibilities, the department recognizes the strong relationship between population health and other government policies.

Examples of service the agency provides:

- Birth and death certificates
- Health reforms to improve population health and the medical system
- Statewide food programs for women, infants and children
- Licensing of nursing homes, hospitals and other healthcare facilities
- Assurance that the water and food are safe to drink and eat
- Ensure early detection of disease outbreaks and other public health threats
