Event Description:

Generative artificial intelligence (AI) and large-language models seem to be everywhere, accompanied by lots of promises and uncertainty. But how might AI affect the jobs of labor relations professionals? Are there labor relations tasks where AI can be useful? In this remote session, management negotiators, a labor union researcher, and a third-party neutral will share their experimentation with using AI in some labor relations tasks, kicking off a conversation about the possibilities and pitfalls of AI for labor relations professionals.
