Client Spotlight

A graduate from Boston University’s School of Management, Hillary Feder worked as an assistant buyer at Filene’s department store in Boston, and then in Minnesota as a senior buyer at Dayton-Hudson department stores.

The idea of opening Hillary’s Hand Painted and Personalized Gifts came after she decided to stay home to raise her children. While looking for a child’s birthday party gift, she realized that kids and families don’t need more “stuff” and that something personal would be more meaningful. As a result, she and her son created a hand-painted T-shirt to give as a present. It was a big hit. Soon others were asking her to make shirts for their families, and in 1989 her business was born.

Hillary’s started in her home, but soon moved to a storefront on Main Street in downtown Hopkins. “I love being on Main Street and part of the community, but walk-in traffic is limiting, so I needed to grow my corporate business.”

She worked with her consultant from the Twin Cities Region SBDC to step back and review her marketing strategies. “My SBDC consultant was great. Together we developed the tools and materials to shift from consumer gifting into the corporate recognition market.”

While not planning on retiring anytime soon, she is again working with the SBDC to help plan for a new generation of leadership at Hillary’s. “I am grateful to the SBDC for helping me get here, and I look forward to working with them on our next steps.”
