Top Government Websites and Digital Achievements Honored by the Center for Digital Government

SACRAMENTO, CA - August 23, 2012 - e.Republic's Center for Digital Government has announced the 2012 winners of its annual Best of the Web and Digital Government Achievement Awards.

In its 17th year, Best of the Web (BOW) recognizes outstanding government portals and websites based on innovation, functionality and efficiency. The BOW first place winners are Alabama (state), Louisville (city), and Orange County, Fla. (county).

The Digital Government Achievement Awards (DGAA) highlight outstanding agency and department websites and applications. Fifty-six awards in eight categories were given this year.

"Digital technology has fundamentally changed the way people interact with their government and we are seeing it demonstrated through everything from full service portals to special purpose mobile apps," said Todd Sander, executive director of the Center for Digital Government. "We're excited about the opportunities governments are creating to make new things possible and to do the old things faster and more efficiently." The Center thanks them for their continuing innovation and congratulates them on their achievements!"
