V. CHAIR’S REPORT

In the absence of Senator Hoffman, Bailey handled the Recognition for Outgoing Council Member David Quilleash.

David Quilleash has completed his term of service with the Council but was invited to join us today so he could be duly recognized for his many contributions.

Bailey noted that Quilleash was always prepared. As a member and Chair of the Grant Review Committee, he guided discussions and demonstrated excellent leadership.

Bartolic presented Quilleash with a plaque in appreciation for his many years of service with the Council from August 2012 to July 2018. Some Council members then added their personal thoughts.
Reed said that it was a pleasure working with David for two terms, he’s a “great person,” and Reed learned so much from him. Reed offered additional thanks to David for all his support.

Smith noted that when David was there, she always felt comfortable that business would be handled professionally.

Jillian Nelson said she looked through all of her papers from the Partners in Policymaking® program (both are graduates) and found his name on the roster of her first class ten years ago. She commented on his impact and urged him to do more.

Quilleash said that we can work together in many ways and we'll continue to see him in the coming months.

COUNCIL PROGRAM

2018 Minnesota Racial & Ethnic Populations Survey of Attitudes and Outlook Regarding Healthcare Services and Costs

Bailey then introduced today’s program, and Tom Pearson, Derek Pearson, and Lynn Schreifels, MarketResponse International, who presented the findings of this Health Care Survey.

Tom Pearson said that he would be highlighting the survey findings in two main parts – Satisfaction levels with current health care services and concerns, and beliefs and opinions about the healthcare system.

Today’s findings are from a supplemental survey that was conducted with Minnesota’s racial and ethnic communities to assure that their voices and personal perspectives were heard. This is an oversampling of three groups.

The survey was administered as a paper questionnaire at community centers where people in these communities gather – the American Indian Community Center, Brian Coyle Community Center (African, East African, Hispanic communities), and at an event in St. Louis Park that was attended by individuals from the Southeast Asian community. Many individuals did not speak English so interpreters and translators were present.

The survey objectives were the same as with the general population survey but striving to capture the attitudes and values around health care and health care systems that may be different when compared with the overall results.

Tom Pearson noted some demographic differences where rates of employment, education, and income levels may have been contributing factors in the overall results –

- 40% of African American respondents were employed (lowest of all groups);
- The highest portion of college graduates was the Southeast Asian respondents (58%) as was their income level;
- Household income was lowest among East African respondents.

He also noted significant differences across all groups –

- The highest rates of uninsured are in the Hispanic and East African communities; respondents in these communities reported delaying medical care due to costs;
- American Indian and East African respondents were least likely to believe insurance premiums have increased but they also had a highest rates of enrollment in Medical Assistance or MinnesotaCare;
- In the African American community, 47% of respondents believe they’ll be better off regarding health care quality and affordability three years from now in contrast to respondents in the Hispanic and American Indian communities who believe they’ll be worse off.

As with the general population survey, an attitudinal segmentation was also done with these communities, showing beliefs that are most closely aligned with either a free market system or one where government is actively involved. In terms of attitudes and values, Tom Pearson said there is nothing statistically significant that distinguishes one group from another group in this segmentation analysis.

Respondents from all communities –
● Gave Minnesota’s health care system higher overall quality rating compared to the US health care system as a whole;
● Preferred a government operated system vs a private system;
● Believe that the federal government should continue to match state spending for Medicaid;

A majority of respondents from these communities -
● Believe that government is responsible for ensuing that all Americans have health care coverage;
● Believe that Congress should address health care reform on a gradual basis rather than a repeal and replace approach to the Affordable Care Act.

MarketResponse International was thanked for their presentation. Council members received a copy of the results of the 2018 Minnesota Racial & Ethnic Populations Survey.

Disability Rights Video

The Council Program was then continued with the “Disability Rights: Voting in Minnesota” video presentation. Many of the individuals interviewed are well known to the Council including Ashley Bailey and Noah McCourt.

Pamela Hoopes, Minnesota Disability Law Center (MDLC), introduced the video. She said this was created for people with disabilities, family members, and election judges. The video covers the voting registration process, shows examples of voting equipment with accessibility features that allow for completely independent voting, and the personal experiences of self advocates in exercising their right to vote.

The MDLC also conducts polling place surveys and those surveys continue to identify accessibility issues and other barriers that make it difficult or prevent people with disabilities from freely participating in the voting process.

Hoopes stated that Secretary of State Steve Simon is a strong supporter of voting rights for people with disabilities. Throughout the video, he speaks about the many accommodations that are available to assure that people with disabilities can vote; and the ongoing efforts being made in Minnesota to make the voting process easier for everyone.
The YouTube video can be accessed at the MDLC website at http://mylegalaid.org/about/our-work/disability-law with links to an audio description version, a version with subtitles, and a transcript. The Council has also posted the video.

A study of non-medical waiver transportation issues is being conducted. Committee members offered their input during the meeting and additional feedback was requested. The study is looking at ways to increase transit and transportation services for individuals receiving waiver services and making improvements to transportation services for waiver recipients.
